ARMY STREAMLINES ORGANIZATION

Released by U. S. War Department, Bureau of Public Relations.

THIS MAP DEPICTS the new division of the Continental United States into six Army areas under Army Ground Force's control, a part of the War Department Reorganization Plan announced recently. Under this plan, which becomes effective June 11, 1946, Army areas will replace Service Commands and will place tactical as well as area command in the hands of Ground Force's Army commanders. Headquarters for the six armies will be located at the following cities: New York City, Baltimore, Atlanta, San Antonio, Chicago and San Francisco.

Streamlined Organizing Puts Coast In Sixth Army Area Under Stillwell

Six armies, each with an assigned geographical area, will form the defense force of continental United States under the War Department's reorganization plan which becomes effective June 11, General Jacob L. Devers, Commanding General of the Army Ground Forces, announced. The army commanders will be responsible to General Devers for the accomplishment of training and related operational missions.

The reorganization in the continental United States is being effected in personnel and the more efficient use of available troops, wipes out much of the organizational set-up established in this country during the war years. The Eastern and Western Defense Commands had previously been absorbed and now the nine Service Commands will be discontinued as administrative areas of the abolished Army Service Forces. Use will be made, however, of some of the old service command headquarters as sub-offices of the new army areas.

The War Department organization, on the top level, also is being changed to meet peace time conditions, with special emphasis being given to scientific research and development. Some of the former Army Service Forces functions are being taken over by the War Department special staff.

Army commanders have been assigned most of the Service Command housekeeping functions, except those taken over by the War Department, giving the commanders area and administrative responsibility as well as tactical responsibility.

The Commanding General of the Army Ground Forces is charged with the execution, in time of emergency, of planned operations for the defense of the United States; providing assistance, at the request of the civil powers and at the direction of the President, in the control of domestic emergencies; control of training and operations of Army ground forces; determination of the organization, composition, equipment and training of all ground combat and service units assigned to

Army ground forces; research and development of equipment in which combatant arms have a primary responsibility; determination, under War Department direction, of Army ground forces personnel and materiel requirements; operation of certain school and replacement facilities; training supervision of the ROTC, National Guard and Organized Reserve units.

General Courtney H. Hodges will command the First Army and the First Army Area, which includes Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey and Delaware, with headquarters at New York City. The old First Service Command headquarters at Boston will be retained as a sub-office of the office, with Major General Ira T. Wyche in command.

Lieutenant General William H. Simpson will command the Second Army and the Second Army Area, which includes Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky, with headquarters at Baltimore, Md. The old Fifth Service Command headquarters at Columbus, O., will be kept as a sub-office with Major General Robert S. Beightler in command.

Lieutenant General Oscar W. Griswold will command the Seventh Army and the Third Army Area, which includes North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi and Tennessee, with headquarters in Atlanta, Georgia, formerly used by the Fourth Service Command. Fourth Service Command Headquarters at Atlanta is being discontinued, but the physical facilities will be utilized by the Seventh Army. The Seventh Army which was inactivated in Germany prior to its present reorganization will function in the Third Army area since the Third is being continued on occupational duty in Germany.

General Jonathan Wainwright will command the Fourth Army and the Fourth Army Area, which includes Texas, Louisiana, Arkansas, Oklahoma and New Mexico, with headquarters at San Antonio, Texas. Eighth Ser-

Low Postwar Unemployment Dip Passed

Governor Earl Warren has reported that the low point of the postwar employment dip in California was reached in February or March this year, when approximately 3,140,000 civilians were employed. This figure includes proprietors and all other types of self-employed, as well as wage and salary workers. It covers all industries and all economic activities in the state. By April 15, civilian employment in California had risen to an estimated 3,200,000, and on May 15 it was between 3,230,000 and 3,280,000, he said.

Further employment gains will come in June and July, partly through seasonal increases in agricultural activities and partly through expected expansion in trade, services, manufacturing and construction. By July 15, civilian employment in California may reach 3,330,000.

The number of persons unemployed and seeking work in California reached an estimate high of 475,000 to 525,000 in March and has since declined slightly to an estimated 450,000-500,000 at the end of April.

Unemployment insurance claims by non-veterans in California reached their peak of 274,000 the week ending February 21, and have since declined steadily to 194,000 the week ending May 23.

Unemployment claims by World War II veterans in California declined from 117,000 the week of March 21 to 100,000 the week of May 23.
